THE CONNECTICUT STATE UNIVERSITY

Central Connecticut State University • New Britain

Southern Connecticut State University • New Haven
Western Connecticut State University • Danbury

The Connecticut State University encompasses the State with major campuses in four metropolitan centers: Central Connecticut State University in New Britain, Eastern Connecticut State University in Willimantic, Southern Connecticut State University in New Haven, and Western Connecticut State University in Danbury. It enrolls some 35,000 students who are taught by approximately 1,100 full-time faculty members as well as some hundreds of part-time instructors.

The origins of the Connecticut State University reach back to 1849 when a school for teachers was established in New Britain. Over the years the campuses evolved from normal schools to teachers colleges, to multi-purpose state colleges and, finally, to universities. Today after 135 years of growth and development the four campuses of the Connecticut State University are thoroughly diversified institutions. Among their alumni are physicians, teachers, lawyers, dentists, nurses, clergy, business people, journalists, scholars, librarians, artists, and a host of other professional workers. The graduates of the campuses of the Connecticut State University contribute to all aspects of the State's economic, social and cultural life.

The governance of the Connecticut State University is the responsibility of a sixteen-member Board of Trustees. Fourteen of the Trustees are appointed by the Governor and two are students who are elected to the Board by their classmates. The President of the Connecticut State University is responsible for the administration of the system. Each campus is given a considerable measure of autonomy and functions under the leadership of a President.
